An easy-care, drought-tolerant garden

The Ninegars, who live at 521 11th Street in Manhattan Beach, adjacent to the greenbelt, decided to plant an easy-care garden last fall that could survive on very little water. The garden only needs to be watered for 10 minutes, three times a week.

"We are thrilled with the results," said Kristi Ninegar. "It is more beautiful than the old garden that we slaved over."

Homes and gardens wanted

We see so many beautiful homes and gardens in the beach cities as we drive around town doing our jobs that The Beach Reporter would like to publish pictures of them. If you are proud of your garden or decorating skills, and would like to share what you have done in print with your fellow residents, please send high-resolution photos to editor@tnrnews.com along with some background about the garden or room.
